WASHINGTON BRINGS
FREEDOM TO INDIA

Mrs. Annie Besant Foremost Figure
In Bringing Country Self-Respect
In Giving It Control Over
Internal Affairs

ALL HINDUSTAN PAYS HOMAGE TO FAMOUS WOMAN

WASHINGTON, Apr. 10.—An era of political freedom is dawning for the 300 motley millions of India—an era of freedom in which India will control its internal affairs while remaining a member of the British commonwealth of nations, willingly and not through force.

And having found its freedom, all India will pay homage for the rest of its national history to a feminine George Washington—Mrs. Annie Besant, president of the Theosophical Society.

For half a century Mrs. Besant has labored untiringly for a free India and once has been interned by the British government because of her efforts. This despite the fact that Mrs. Besant is an alien and has no blood affinity with the Indian people.

The romantic tale of Mrs. Besant's life work was related to a correspondent here today by Fritz Kunz of the American Theosophical Society, who for 17 years was associated with Mrs. Besant in her work in India.

Started in 1889

"Mrs. Besant joined the Theosophical Society in 1889 and shortly thereafter went to India and settled at Madras," Kunz said. "During the first 25 years of her stay in Hindustan, she devoted her attention to educational work—inspiring interest in Indian philosophy, languages and religious, and founding schools and universities.

"Finding further progress along educational lines blocked, she launched herself actively into political work in 1915. She vigorously demanded home rule for India within the British Empire.

"In 1914 she had bought the Madras Standard, a newspaper, and had changed its name to New India. With her two monthly magazines, her daily paper and her weekly paper she fought relentlessly for Indian freedom.

"Old-school members of the British bureaucracy became alarmed. They caused Mrs. Besant's internment in 1917. But a storm broke all over the country.

"That same year the British government announced its acceptance of home rule as the goal of its Indian policy. Mrs. Besant, though still interned, was elected president of the Indian national congress.

"In December 1917, she presided over the congress and presented India's demands to the empire.

"Just then the unfortunate Amritsar affair occurred—when a British officer shot down hundreds of unarmed Indians with machine guns and only ceased firing because his ammunition ran out.

"That gave Mrs. Besant's movement a decided setback and encouraged the extremist movement of Mahatma Gandhi.

"But Gandhi was interned in 1921 and his movement collapsed.

"Associated with Mrs. Besant in her work has been the Rt. Hon. Srinivasa Sastri, a progressive native of India, who was a British delegate at the Washington conference on limitation of armament.

NEAR TAZEWELL SUNDAY NIGHT

TAZEWELL, April 12.—Starlin Spratlin of Piney Hollow was robbed of $700 in cash, by two masked men Sunday night at about 10 o'clock.

Mr. Spratlin says that he was in bed, when the robbers called him out and told him that they were officers and had warrants to search his place, whereupon he opened the door and seeing that they were masked he made no effort to close the door, but the two robbers made their way inside before he could close it. They demanded his money which he refused at first to give them. Then with revolvers and flash lights in hand they proceeded to search about the house. At last they gave up the search and marched Mr. Spratlin at the muzzle of their revolvers to where his money was hidden in a cigar box which amounted to $700 or more. After this was put in their pockets they took leave. Horses were hitched near the house on which the yeggs made their get-away. Efforts are being made by Mr. Spratlin to secure blood hounds to trace the robbers.

Large groups of members from other churches came after the regular prayer services were over at their own churches.

The biblical incident of the marriage at Cana where water was changed to wine was given a modern application by the evangelist. The obedience of these commanded, their giving of the wine to each other and other points were emphasized. Rev. Callis, Prof. B. V. Grenfell and Mrs. Callis rendered a program at the high school auditorium this morning, the former speaking on the subject of workmanship, the others furnished the music. "Mr. Hale uses his rich powerful voice generally well. He is a singer of fine dramatic feeling and intelligence. He did some very good work indeed in Chausson's 'La Caravane.'"

PARK CENTER IN EAST END STREET

Contract for Proposed Construction
Provides Two Driveways on Each Side

Now that the East End paving proposition is apparently approaching materialization, various speculations are being made by citizens as to the main features of the work as set forth in the contract executed between the city of Middlesboro and the state highway commission October 3, 1922.

According to Judge T. G. Anderson who drew the contract and to Mayor J. H. Keeney, the agreement provides that a strip twenty feet in width in the center of East Cumberland avenue be parked, with a driveway of twenty feet on either side. The central plot may be made into a spot of beauty if it is properly cared for by the city while the two driveways will be ample space for vehicles. Besides this, it will make the total cost practically one-third less. This street park will run from Fitzpatrick avenue to Tenth street.

The contract provides that the paving of Fitzpatrick avenue be twenty-five feet in width instead of thirty which was the original plan. This change was made on account of abutting property owners who objected to paying for the greater width.

The specifications which have been prepared by the city and which were sent to the highway commission over a week ago have not been returned, according to Mayor Keeney.

The work of redecorating the auditorium is now completed and the meeting Monday night will be the first of the kind to be held there since the improvements have been made. The walls and ceiling of the place has been painted, the latter being artistically stenciled with floral designs in colors.

FOR A NEW DEPOT

Middlesboro has outgrown its pas-senger depot. The present small frame building would suffice for a rail-read village of a few hundred inhabi-tants but for a city with a population of twelve thousand it is wholly in-adeguate and little less than a dis-grace to the town. Local railway officials, it is understood, are in fa-vor of erecting a larger and more mod-ern depot but they of course have no authority to act in the matter. The time has come, however, when local officials, civic clubs and the general public should join in a sweeping move-ment for a new building.

Not only is the present depot too small to accommodate the large num-bers of patrons who arrive in and de-part from Middlesboro daily, but its condition from a standpoint of sanita-tion is such that many persons of av-erage refinement prefer to remain out-side rather than attempt to crowd in-side and find a seat. During the cold weather many women were seen stand-ing outside preferring to face the in-clement weather rather than remain in such quarters.

Passengers, in passing through a town or making a brief stop-over, in-variably judge the place and its peo-ple by the size and quality of its de-pot. If it is a commodious, comfort-able building the town is deemed a prosperous, populous city, if it is an ancient, dirty, ill-smelling frame struc-ture such as Middlesboro is forced to se, the place is contemptuously label-ed a "jerk water" town.

Other towns along the L and N have depots more commensurate with the size and quality of the towns. Some towns much smaller than Middlesboro have adequate brick buildings for the use of railway patrons. Obviously some partiality has been shown. Just what brand of psychology or method of rea-soning has caused the wealthy corpora-tion "to love the one and hate the other" of the towns is a public mys-tery. In all justice to the officials "higher up" it is believed that they are not fully cognizant of the need for better facilities for their patrons here.

Certain it is, if any of them had to reside in Middlesboro and hear the daily complaints that arise both from local citizens and visitors they would lose no time in planning for a more suitable building.

The company has not been lax in its provision for its patron's comfort in other ways. They have adequate sleeping car accommodations wherever possible and are ever striving to give the best passenger train service. But the depot is the patron's home while he is waiting for a train and it should at least afford a semblance of a com-fortable temporary resting place.

Let's all kick for a new depot until we get it. We have done our part in filling the L and N coffers and it will be no charity on the company's part to build a decent depot here.

Things could be worse. If you get restless this spring think of the gang in jail.

DESTRUCTIVE PREPARATION

JOSEPH F. BOSWORTH FOR REPRESENTATIVE

The announcement of Honorable Joseph F. Bosworth that he will again be candidate for nomination by the Republican party to the position of representative from Bell county, is particularly gratifying to his constitu-ents in this section who see in him the section's strongest political fac-tor. Probably no other man has fought so consistently for Southeastern Kentucky during the past twenty years and probably to no other man does this section owe more for favors received than to Judge Bosworth.

Joe F. Bosworth came to Middles-boro from Central Kentucky as one of its early settlers, in 1889, and has cast his fortunes with those of the city and county since that time. Most of this time Judge Bosworth has been in public life. He served as city at-torney two years and police judge eight years. He has served twelve years in the state House and eight years in the state Senate. He was speaker of the House two years and was minority leader last session.

Judge Bosworth's legislative service is especially marked by his work for good roads. He really inaugurated the move for better highways in Ken-tucky and for this reason he won the title, "Kentucky's Father of Good Roads." It is in recognition of his service in this line that the proposed trail from the Tennessee line to Rich-mond, the only direct route yet plan-ned through the mountains, will be called the Bosworth Trail.

If Judge Bosworth is returned to the legislature—and his friends here have no uneasiness that he will not be, Southeastern Kentucky knows that she has a friend at court, one who will never spare effort or thought to give his section the best that can be given and bring it farther along the road of progress.

The more a man blows the less it counts.

THE OPEN FORUM

Editor Daily News:
Hon. Alben W. Barkley, candidate for nomination for governor of Ken-tucky, in your columns Tuesday ex-plains his exact position on special taxation on coal production in Ky.

He says that the present tax on coal probably is a failure and that a per-centage tax on production is the fair method, in view of the fact that a tax on coal is sure to come.

Such a tax has not been imposed in any state, on bituminous coal; and it does not seem, by any means certain that it will be imposed in Kentucky. Pennsylvania has taxed her anthracite coal, but not her bituminous coal.

Kentucky must market her coal in competition with coal produced in Tennessee, W. Virginia, Ohio, Indiana and Illinois. What equality would there be in subjecting the coal pro-duction of Kentucky to a burden that is not borne by coal mines in competing states?

Pennsylvania has purposely kept the production of her bituminous mines free from such a tax, because it must be sold in competition with Ohio and W. Virginia coal.

There are no reasons to justify the assertion that "present taxation of coal property is a failure." Coal prop-erty is taxed just as all other property in the state is taxed.

It is not intended by advocates of a state coal tax to change the present method of taxation, and make the production tax take the place of present levies. The plan advocated by Congressman Barkley means a double taxation of coal property pure and simple.

If coal production is to be doubly taxed, the method Mr. Barkley ad-vocates is the most objectionable. Under his percentage plan eastern Ken-tucky would be more heavily taxed than west Kentucky, because east Kentucky has a better grade of coal than west Kentucky consequently it sells higher.

His method is a taxation on quality. It is a taxation on clean coal compared to dirty coal; a tax on screened coal, on prepared coal to straight mine-run. His method would tax the operator not only for producing coal, but would tax him additionally for screen-ing and cleaning. In other words, it would put a premium on poor qual-ity poorly prepared coal. It would be more to the interest of the people to tax non-production, rather than pro-duction in the state. His plan puts a premium on those who buy high areas of coal land and lock it up. It puts a penalty on labor and business.

England taxes earned incomes far less than unearned incomes. Inherited incomes are heavily taxed, but Mr.

Barkley proposed to put a premium on inherited incomes.

The constitution of the United States prohibits tariffs on imports between states; it prohibits the U. S. Government to levy duties on exports. The Democratic party to which Mr. Barkley belongs has always favored the least restriction on foreign trade; advocates free trade with foreign na-tions. How can that party consistently attempt to evade the spirit of the Constitution, by attempting to place an export duty on coal marketed be-tween Kentucky and her neighboring states?

Pennsylvania having a monopoly on anthracite coal has succeeded in plac-ing a special tax on New England. This would be a bad example for Kentucky to follow, even if it could be accomplished—which it can not.

Why should there be a special tax on coal production more than on the production of tobacco in Kentucky?

FROM LESLIE HAMILTON, BRIDE-TO-BE, TO LESLIE HAMILTON

I am so glad I found you, dear lit-tle secret drawer.

I shall keep as long as I live your one secret, and I will never disclose your hiding place to anyone.

I am quite sure when John's moth-er gave me this beautiful desk that she never had an idea of the wonderful treasure she was bestowing on me. It is the dearest possession I have.

It thrills me through and through to think that I have found this secret drawer which has held for hundreds of years only this scrap of paper upon which is written:

"I hope whoever shall come after me, that finds this secret drawer will make it, as I have, a receptacle of all her art's secrets."

"One of the greatest mistakes a wo-man can make is to let anyone see in-to the innermost recesses of her soul. Yet we poor feminine things are built in such a way that we at times must disgorge our over-charged hearts."

"Invariably when we do this to mor-tals we come to find disillusion and grief, but this dear place of silence has kept all of my secrets and I know it will keep those of the next woman who finds her way to it."

"They tell me now that I am going to die, and so I am taking back my confidences and laying them, one by one, upon the fire, for no one, not even those who have loved me best, may know—as these yellowing sheets of pa-per could tell—that the gay little Mar-quise, as they called me at the court, was beloved of a king."

Who was "the gay little Marquise?" I do not know, but I do know that she loved devotedly and was loved in re-turn; and by a king."

In this secret drawer she laid her heart and this silent friend she has passed on to me.

Oh, gay little Marquise, I am sorry for you tonight for you and your king-ly lover have been dust these hundreds of years. Probably in some old gar-den of France the old rose trees are whispering to each other of when he picked a blossom, kissed it, and gave it to you and you placed it above your heart. Those rose-trees are waiting—waiting until you come again, and you are dust.

Dear little Marquise, I wish you could know that my love has just be-gun, for tomorrow I shall go to my lover to be his "until death do us part."

Tomorrow will begin that new life, that life for which every woman feels herself born; a life the fullness and bliss of which every woman dreams, a life the loss of which is the greatest tragedy that can come to one of her sex.

I wonder if every girl on her wed-ding eve looks forward to the never-ending happiness that is to come to me, I wonder if before my mother slipped away from her father's house to be-come my father's wife, she was think-ing the thoughts that I am thinking now. It seems to me, dear little Mar-quise, that no one, not even you, has loved and is loved as I.

First in this new life there will be the joy of belonging. Has every oth-er woman's soul thrilled as mine does when her lover whispers, "Sweetheart you are mine?" Already I have learn-ed this means more than all else the desire to be possessed and possess in turn.

John will belong to me. In all the world there will be no one as near to him as I. When he is happy, I will be happy; when he sorrows, I must grieve and even if disgrace should come it will be mine to share.

After tomorrow we two will be one. Oh, gay little Marquise, I am afraid that you were never quite happy be-cause in the vague message that you left behind, it seems that you could not acknowledge your lover before the world. You never had the delicious thrill of pride in your lover. Only this little secret drawer knew that you were his and he was yours.

But tomorrow, I—Leslie Hamilton—am going to proclaim my love to the whole wide world. Tomorrow I am going to John before God and man with pride on my brow, love on my lips and devotion in my heart.

Poor little Marquise, my tears are falling on your written confession. I am sorry for you as I contrast your love—your lover with mine.

You loved a king whom you could not acknowledge.

I love a man whose love for me is to be proclaimed tomorrow where all the world may hear.

♦♦♦♦ By Berton Braley ♦♦♦♦

They say there are microbes that lurk in a kiss

(Especially one that is thrilly),
But why be afraid of the flavor of bliss

Because of some silly bacilli?
With germs in our crackers and germs in our meat.

The microbes are few that one mis-es;

So as to bacilli, I firmly repeat,
I'd much rather get 'em in kisses.

I fancy that germs on red feminine lips

Are not so tremendously vicious.
For otherwise nectar one tenderly sips
Could never be half so delicious.

If microbes are there, they are nice gentle germs,

Which bring no infection serious,
Although, as each experimenter af-firms,

They make you slightly delicious!

Germs linger longer in kisses, no doubt that is true,

And germs which stay with you for-ever,
They make a changed man quite com-pletely of you

In spite of your earnest endeavor;
They're dangerous germs of a linger-ing kind,

Whose strength its no use to dis-parage;

The microbes in kisses, you'll frequent-ly find,

Infect you with love—and with marriage!

Quickest way to remove corns is put your feet under the chair.

Make THE Backyard Pay

The craze for flowers of the more expensive and popular class has bid fair to cause old-fashioned zinnias, marigolds, cockscomb and petunias to be forgotten. The common flowers, however, have an important place in our scheme of gardening and, in fact, are worthy of more attention on the part of everyone who plants a garden. Among the many advantages of zinnias and other annual flowering plants in their class are small cost and quick results. Where it is desired to have a border of flowers along the vegetable garden one packet each of zinnia, marigold, cockscomb, phlox and petunia will supply a variety of pleasing color from midsummer until frost. By starting the plants in the house and transplanting them to the garden they will bloom considerably earlier. The easy way, however, is to sow the seeds in the place where the plants are to grow.

Castor Beans

Where something large is wanted to hide an unsightly background plant a double row of castor beans, using the large bronze sort for the back row and the dwarf green sort for the front row. A few plants of cosmos can be worked in between the castor beans and a row of zinnias in front so that a complete screen will be formed.

Sunflowers, not the very large kind, but the smaller ones, are very effective for mixing with other plants. Spiderflower is also good for mixing in with other plants that grow from two to four feet in height.

After all, there is no flower that is quite so effective as scarlet sage or salvia for mass planting. A double row of salvia, growing in front on a green hedge of California privet is very striking and attractive. Zinnias could also be used this way, but in either case plenty of water must be given the plants because the hedge draws heavily upon the moisture supply in the soil.

There are at least 20 of the old-fashioned flowers any of which may be used to advantage, especially in backyard and border planting. The cost of starting and growing them is small. The list includes, in addition to those already mentioned, cornflower, "lovelies-bleeding," larkspur, China asters, snapdragon, garden balsam, four-o'clock, mignonette, candytuft, Japanese pink, Iceland poppy, lobelia, pansies and forget-me-nots.

Strawflowers

Strawflowers, called "everlasting flowers" by our grandmothers, are again coming into popularity mainly because they make a beautiful border as a summer bloomer and in addition the flowers can be cut and dried and hold their color for use in the house during the winter. The seed of the strawflower may be sown in the open ground but the plants do better started in the house and transplanted to the garden.

Strawflowers want good soil and the plants should be set about 18 inches apart and grow about 30 inches high. The flowers for use in the house in the winter should be cut before fully grown and dried in the shade. A good plan is to tie the cut flowers together in small bunches by their stems, then wrap in newspaper, leaving the ends of the package open and hang in a cool, dry place.

After all, there is nothing equal to zinnias and a number of others of their class for quick results in hiding a fence or some unsightly background. As time goes a screen of shrubbery and more permanent plants can be planted.

Here's What Man Thinks As He Falls Seven Stories

By JACK JUNGMEYER

LOS ANGELES, April 9.—You have stood on high places and gawked and imagined the sensations of falling.

A dozen times in his 19 years, Elmer Goss, stepfather, doing the jobs "jolly other guys are afraid of," has dropped thus to what should have been certain death. But each time a benevolent fate has placed a cushion under him.

His most spectacular fall came a few days ago here when Goss and a companion building cleaner were preoccupied from the eighth story as a scaffolding gave way. Brownie Brown was horribly and fatally mangled, but Goss bounced off an awning within a second of death and landed unhurt on the street.

What he thought, saw and felt during the seven clock ticks it took him to plunge 112 feet is here pictured as he related it within an hour after the experience.

By Elmer Goss

Daredevil of High Places

TIME, 11:30: (Night).—Eight stories upon a scaffold cleaning the at my watch and started across the board to help Brownie tie in his end. About time to eat. Suddenly I see the rope part and we start down. "I guess we're goners, Brownie" I yell. He doesn't answer. He's straddle the plank. And the moon white on his face. I am standing up.

11:30:01—We pass the seventh floor. I start to swing my arms to keep upright. Brownie faints. I see his head wobble. Scared senseless. A tackle hook bounces up and hits him on the chin as the board nicks a cornice. He still clutches the board, riding like a buckaroo. Below I see a man start out into the empty street. Looking up. Mouth open.

11:30:02—My mother in Gary, Ind. How bad she and dad and the kids will feel when they bring me home. She used to bail me out for doing this dangerous work. . . But I'm falling.

11:30:03—My thoughts flash back to Brownie, riding that bucking board. Why don't he wake up and try to grab something? I try to yell at him but the wind in my mouth won't let me. Guess we're goners, all right. Keep your head in boy, so your neck won't crack when you hit. Keep fanning the air. Still standing up straight.

11:30:04—Why ain't I scared? That must have been the fourth floor cornice flashing past. The man in the street has moved out a little farther. His open mouth a hole of black shadow. Street getting closer. Someone screaming. Moon shining calm. Yes, the old lady will take it pretty hard. That's the bunk about dying before you hit. Still—look at Brownie. Those and light wires twisting round him like snakes.

11:30:05—There goes the third story. Yes, twisting like snakes. Or like wild grape vines. Falling. Umm—'I'm still falling. Why the devil don't I faint!

11:30:06—Close now. All muscles tight for the smash. Neck in. Walking on a plank in the air. A teeter-totter. First I'm up, then Brownie. Everything clear, like a slow motion movie. Street, gray. Hard. Goners, sure. But keep fanning.

11:30:07—Whack. Scaffold board hits an awning on the second story. It jars. My knees bend. I'm bumped out at an angle. I catch my first breath. I come smack to the sidewalk on my feet. My feet sting—but I'm not a goner. Then another hard smash. Brownie right behind me. Missed the awning. No use trying to talk to him. Brownie's a goner.

GOSS' CLOSE SHAVES

As boy of 12 fell 90 feet from coal tippie into pile of waste; no injuries. Tumbled 75 feet off steel truss at Gary, Ind., into load of sand. Minor bruises.

Rocketed 100 feet off smokestack at Waukegan, Ill., into carload ashes on passing freight; knocked wind out.

Dropped 112 feet from Los Angeles building with broken scaffolding. landed on awning and bounced to the street; stung his feet.

He has seen four of his high-job companions killed.

Committee Named To Study Business Cycles Urges Caution In Boom Periods In Report Just Issued

MATTHEW WOLL

MISS MARY VAN KLEECK

The Federal Reserve banks now hold a much larger amount of gold than is needed to support all the credit requirements of American industry and agriculture, according to the committee on Unemployment and Business Cycles, appointed by Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce, which has just made its report. One of the propositions brought forward by the investigators, who have been seeking a way to guard against future periods of depression such as those which have always followed prosperity in the past, is to set aside a special reserve of this gold against the foreign demands that will come with resumption of normal world business, thus removing from the field of temptation an easy means of inflating American credit to the danger point.

Banks are urged by the report to use extreme precaution in granting loans near the peak of the business rise. Individual business men are warned that their best protection is to study all available sources of authentic information regarding world and national stocks of their respective commodities guiding their purchases accordingly. The Federal Government and the states are asked to delay public works and not combine with private building expansion during the current boom. Many other interesting correctives are advanced by the committee, whose personnel makes the report carry weight. Owen D. Young, president of the General Electric Company, is chairman. The other members are Joseph Defrees, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce; Mary Van Kleeck, of the Russell Sage Foundation; Matthew Woll, vice-president of the American Federation of Labor; Clarence M. Woolley, president of the American Radiator Company; and Edward Eyre Hunt, secretary of the President's Conference on Unemployment, of which the committee is part.

The National Bureau of Economic Research gathered the mass of facts from which the findings were deduced. Its material, edited by Wesley C. Mitchell, nationally known authority on the business cycle, is shortly to be published in book form. The committee report itself will be part of the book, and can be had separately by applying to the President's Conference on Unemployment, Department of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

PINEVILLE, April 11.—Richard Martin, 17, and David Crockett Winton 13 years old, both negroes, were brought before Judge J. G. Rollins at Kenyon March 30. They pleaded guilty and will be tried in the Federal Court at London May 15. O. K. Lambert, postoffice inspector made the arrest. The amount stolen was six dollars, and when the boys were asked how they divided it David, the younger, said that he got $2.50 and that Richard got $3.50. Judge Rollins then asked why they didn't split even. He said "Oh, I got all that was coming to me." The reason for the difference is still obscure.

COMMITTEE CHOSEN TO PLAN HEALTH EXHIBIT

Funds are running low in the local Red Cross treasury. Even after money on pledges is collected there will be only enough to last until June 1, according to reports made at the recent meeting of the organization. Plans for financing the work during the remainder of the year have not been made.

Johnson dairies, Harrogate; two property owners were given orders to connect up with the sewer on account of unsanitary conditions.

19 Year Record for Pee Gee Mastic Paint

Home of Mrs. T. G. Green, Eatonton, Ga.

Down in Eatonton, Georgia, you'll find real proof of the splendid wearing qualities of Pee Gee Mastic Paint. It was used there some nineteen years ago on the home of Mrs. T. G. Green, who writes the following letter:

"My house was painted with Pee Gee Mastic Paint sixteen years ago, and I want you to estimate what will be needed to go over it again. The house is in splendid condition although such a long time has elapsed since it was last painted. One room in which Pee Gee Flatcoat was used nearly twelve years ago is in good condition still, but I want it freshened up."

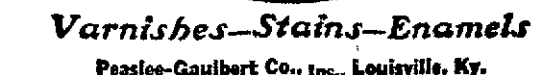

The great durability of Pee Gee Mastic Paint is due to its 50% of Zinc content ground in pure Linseed Oil and White Lead, making it a Double Pigment Paint.

Pee Gee Mastic Paint produces a tile-like film which successfully resists the elements, does not crack, peel or chalk off.

The high zinc content gives Pee Gee Mastic Paint its unusual covering and wearing capacity. It is by far the most economical paint you can use.

For interior walls and ceiling, use Pee Gee Flatcoat, the modern, sanitary, durable, flat oil finish. Comes in 24 deep, rich velvety colors.

ADOPT RESOLUTIONS ON DEATH MRS. L. D. HILL

Good attendance and a good program characterized the meeting of the Kiwanis Club at noon today at which time Supt. J. W. Bradner served as chairman. The meeting was saddened by the fact of Mrs. L. D. Hill's untimely death yesterday. L. D. Hill was the local Kiwanis Club's first president.

Superintendent Bradner, in introducing his speakers, emphasized that he considered it the duty of every Kiwanian to be the best one he could and he impressed the real worth of the club. His first speaker, the Rev. A. E. Reeves, spoke on, "The Evolution of Kiwanis." The Rev. Reeves brought out the point that Kiwanis had not evolved but sprang almost full grown. It started less than eight years ago at a club luncheon, without purpose or motive. Today it has a club in every state of the union and has become a national protest against the standardization of society, he declared, the one movement in the country in which the cement of selfishness can not set.

R. L. Maddox, the next speaker, had for his subject, "The Kiwanian and His Work." He said that an organization was judged by its work and that the Kiwanis Club was judged by the workers in it. He urged the practice of the Golden Rule in every day life as a thing to be adopted by every Ki-wanian for the best good of himself and society.

R. E. Wallace, representative of the Radcliffe Chautauqua, Washington, a guest at the luncheon, gave several short readings of a serious nature that were particularly timely at this occasion. Prof. B. V. Grenfell, song leader at the M. E. Church revival, played two enjoyable piccolo solos and sang an effective solo.

I. D. Wigginton of Barbourville was present at the meeting and presented a proposition to build a brick plant here. He said he would put up $10,000 if some man or group of men would arrange the site and put up the rest of the money needed. The matter was referred to the public affairs committee.

A committee composed of T. R. Hill, H. Overton and Hugh Allen were appointed to draw up resolutions of sympathy to be submitted by the club to L. D. Hill. The resolutions follow:

RESOLUTIONS

Whereas our Master Builder has seen fit to call to a better dwelling place the beloved wife of our first president, Dow Hill, and

Whereas there is a great void in the life and plans of our fellow Kiwanian which human minds can not fathom, but which the minds of Kiwanians want to help to fill, and

Whereas, the sorrow of Mrs. Hill's going is felt by every member of this club because of her encouragement and support to every ideal for which we have striven, therefore

Be it resolved, That the members of this club be true to the spirit of its slogan by building a bulwark of brotherly love about Dow that shall lessen the pain.

Be it further resolved, that we extend to him in this hour the limit of mortals, our deepest sympathy and love.

Be it further resolved, that we recommend him to One Who heals every wound that He causes and Who speaks peace to every troubled soul that calls upon Him.

Be it further resolved that a copy of these resolutions be given to our paper and that a copy be preserved in the records of this club.
